

The Silence Is Golden.

I used to receive weekly phone solicitations for cruises, I have neither the time nor money to go on a cruise.

My sister was pregnant and hospitalized, and my poor mother was constantly running for her phone, only to find they were all solicitations, what we call Junk Phone Calls.

We have never bought anything over the phone, and have no future intents of doing so. If we have any future need for what is being purveyed on the phone now, we will find the necessary sources, trust me. If the telemarketer have a special right, maybe they should have a special ring, so we can ignore them at will.

I see no reason whatsoever that the Do Not Call list should not be as stringent as possible. Let the homeowners make exceptions, not the homeinvaders/ telemarketers.

Thank you. CM.
